EDITORIAL VISIT.—We had the pleasure of a visit last night from Mr. E. A. BRONSON, proprietor of the Barnwell Sentinel. Mr. Bronson is in town on business for the Sentinel, and we have much pleasure in recommending the paper and its proprietor to our community.

WE ARE gratified to learn that Mr. EMANUEL, the elderly gentleman who fell from the up train of the Northeastern Railroad on Saturday last, near Graham's Cross Roads, is not dead, but is receiving proper attention at that place, and hopes are entertained of his recovery.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT .- The mail train on the South Carolina Railroad, due in Columbia at 3 o'clock Monday morning, was thrown from the beauty. The porcelain picture, the highest point track near Hopkins, a burnt pine tree having fallen of excellence to which photography has yet attainacross the track. The cars were considerably ed, was, we believe, first discovered in Germany, damaged, and some of the passengers wounded, though none seriously. The regular trains from this city were delayed about one hour behind schedule time, on account of the accident. 4

HAYNE STREET FILLING UP .- We are pleased to notice the reopening of another of the old business stands of Hayne street. Messrs. Pratt & Wilson Bnos., wholesale druggiste and manufacturing Star Gallery, corner of King and Market streets, chemists, have established themselves at the well which is really a superb work of art. The known location, No. 23 Hayne street, formerly great advantage of porcelain as a material for by Haviland, Stevenson & Co., and offer to purchasers rare chances in their line. These late Confederate officers have opened the first chemical manufactory south of Baltimore, and their enterprise deserves the liberal patronage of

THE FIREMAN'S CELEBRATION .- According to the programme, this takes place to-day, and promises to be one of unusual interest. The steam engines did not have a trial in last April, and the recent contest in Augusta was not satisfactory to the company that attended from this city. The introduction of steam to fire engines is a comparatively novel feature in the South: but there are few cities where it has been received with more favor than in Charleston. At present we have five steamers, and the Marion Company are endeavoring to raise funds to supply themselves with one in the place of their old hand engine, which is worn out.

These five engines are by three different makers and one of them, the Young America, is constructed upon an entirely different principle, being what is generally termed a rotary engine. At this contest the merits of the CLAPP & Jones, the Jeffords, and the Rotary, will be well tried, and it is impossible to say what will be the result, as the friends of the companies, as well as the members, are all betting high upon their favorite machines.

The Fire Department of Charleston ranks among the first in the country, and has always sustained its well-carned reputation. Composed in a great measure of young men, the flower of the city, the members have preserved an esprit de corps that kept them united during the war, and, at its close, infused fresh vigor into the different companies, and now the Department is in a far more flourishing condition than it has been for many years.

The companies will form, at 11 o'clock, on the Citadel Green, and will march to Broad street, where the contest will take place. The different hand companies will act as an escort, and the line will be formed by the Chief and Assistants according to their charters. The playing will take place from the drain pit at the intersection of Broad and Meeting streets, and each company will throw their streams upon a platform covered with sawdust, and arranged as on a previous occasion.

The Mayor and the Clerk of the Board will act as umpires, and will calculate only the distance the solid body of water is thrown. Each company is allowed to play through fifty or one hundred feet of hose, with any size nozzle they prefer, and to carry any amount of steam they choose. This is a far better arrangement than to limit an engine without regard to its capacity, as has been done in other cases. Every care has been taken by the authorities to preserve order, and the parade will be one of the finest ever witnessed. As it commences at an early hour, we would advise our fair readers to secure a window in time, and to be on the qui vive for the gallant firemen.

PORCELAIN PICTURES.—Twenty years ago, one person alone claimed the right of photographing in England; now, there are over 5000 persons enare 20,000 in the United States, and, probably a still greater number in Continental Europe. All our readers of middle age can remember when the art was in its infancy, and the old and original ELECTION FOR REPRESENTATIVE. - An election for daguerrectype, taken upon a plate of prepared were the best that could be procured. Since that the art of photography, and it is interesting to daguerreotype was the ambrotype, which was taken on a plate of ground glass, which showed on both sides of the glass—and one side showed the person in the natural position; whereas, in the original daguerreotype, the figure was always reversed-ornaments worn on the right hand appearing on the left, and vice versa, and so with the parting of the hair, buttons on the coat, &c., &c. Next was discovered the melainotype, which, though not giving as pretty a picture as the ambrotype, was cheaper, and easily cut for medallions, brooches, &c., being taken on sheet iron. Then came the photograph, taken on plain paper, which had a coarse appearance, the unevenness of the paper giving the likeness a look of being pitted. Next appeared the photograph taken on albumenized paper, i. e., paper prepared with the white of egg. This was a great improvement, the albumen giving a smoothness of surface, and a certain gloss, that was very desirable. Soon after a means was discovered of taking several photographs at once, and the cartes de visites became fashionable. We now come to the opaltype, which is taken on opaque glass, and is the nearest approach to the porcelain picture, which is the perfection of the art, and by the uninitiated is often taken for that superior article. But the opaltype, though when first taken very much resembling the porcelain picture, soon streaks, and loses all of its attractive and we recollect that before the war our people used to send to that country to have their likenesses taken on sets of crockery. Specimens of the porcelain picture, said to be equal to anything of the kind in Europe, can now be seen in this city at one or two of the best photographing establishments. Our attention was drawn to the subject by a most beautiful porcelain picture of a child at the photographic pictures is its extreme polish, which is equal to that of a looking glass, and gives a smoothness and fine finish to the likeness that cannot be obtained by any other material. In all the specimens that we have seen, the texture of the clothes, the strands of the hair, and the details of ornament, are brought out with a delicacy and distinctness which we have never seen

which we do not think can be surpassed by the best miniature. In fact, the porcelain pictures

would be taken for miniatures by any one who did not know to the contrary, and the business of the miniature painters, which has of late years so materially decreased, may now be said to have come

entirely to an end, as miniatures, costing from $50

to $100 and upward, cannot possibly compete with porcelain pictures that only cost from $10 to $15.

In closing this article, we would call attention to the fact, which is almost a miracle, that in France
